Dear Mr. Sinatra,

Hi! My name is Paul Brown and I am a middle school teacher who teaches computers and Algebra 1. I must admit that I was not always a fan of yours. When I was growing up as a kid, I did not like your music at all. Back then it was music for old people. As I grew up my musical tastes changed and expanded. I like your music now. I am sorry you are no longer alive. It would have been nice if you could have read this letter. For the computer class I teach, I have given my students a project where they are researching a musical artist. I did one as an example so they could see what a finished project looks like. I chose you because you are such a famous person and I honestly didn't know much about you before doing this project.

My top 5 favorite songs of yours are as follows:

- 1) Theme From New York New York
- 2) My Way
- 3) One For My Baby
- 4) Fly Me To The Moon
- 5) Come Fly With Me

I wonder if you ever got sick of singing some of the songs you sang? You must of sung a lot of these songs many times. I know I probably would have gotten sick of singing the same songs over and over again.

If you were alive and I was able to ask you a question I probably wouldn't be able to ask you just one question. I would ask you if when you first started in the music business did you know you were going to become as famous as you eventually did? Did you get into the music business to get famous or just to have fun because you liked music? As you got older did you have any regrets about anything you did musically or as an actor? If you could change one thing about your music/acting career, what would it be? When you look back over your career, is there one thing that hadn't done, that you wished you could have? I could probably go on forever and ever with these questions, but I won't. I wish you could have read this letter. It was great getting to learn more about you. You had a very long and successful career. Bye!

Sincerely,

Paul Brown
